

Boudicca Looses!

By Toby Riley

On the morning of the 1st of June 61AD, Boudicca, who was a savage Celtic Queen, was declared dead!

After the death of King Prasutagus, who was leader of the Iceni tribe, there have been many up-risings from the Celtic savages.

Boudicca, who was King Prassutagus' wife and Queen, refused to pay taxes to the Roman Government. She rebelled and gathered the Celtic Warriorriors and marched them to many cities in England to fight the Roman army.

The Celtic tribes rampaged over burning cities like Londonium and Colchester killing thousands of Roman men, women and children.

Yesterday it was reported that Governor Suetonius tacitly outmanoeuvred and defeated Boudicca's army and captured Boudicca and her daughters.

Augustus Orrillius observed from the city walls of Londonium. He reported, "As dawn struck, I observed the mighty Roman army slaughtering many, many Celts, decapitating them with their strong steel swords! Blood oozed out of their necks. It was horrifying to watch and made me physically sick to my stomach!

Later in the evening I watched nervously, Boudicca drinking out of a yellow bottle and with in seconds she collapsed to her death! It must have been poison!"

Boudicca is brought to her Death!

By ALFIE GLANCEY

On the morning of the 1st of June 61AD, Boudicca, a savage Celtic Queen, was declared dead!

After the death of King Prasutagus, who was the leader of the Iceni tribe, there have been many uprisings from the Celtic savage warriors.

Queen Boudicca, who was King Prasutagus' wife and queen refused to pay taxes to the Roman Government. She rebelled and gathered her Celtic warriors to destroy cities and to fight the Roman army.

Celtic tribes rampaged through cities such as Londinium and Colchester and killed thousands of Roman men, woman and children.

Yesterday, it was reported that Governor Suetonius tactically outmanoeuvred Boudicca's army and defeated her. It has been reported that Boudicca and her daughters have been captured.

Augustus Orrillius observed from the city walls of Londinium. He reported, "In the morning as the sun rose, I watched the Roman soldiers violently chop the Celtic warriors to their death!

The Roman soldiers dragged Boudicca by her curly ginger hair into a metal cage and tied her hair to the thick metal pole! I could see that Boudicca was in pain! I heard in the evening, that Boudicca had drunk poison from a glass bottle and she had collapsed quickly and died!

Boudicca is brought to her death!

By Kacie Hall

On the morning of the first of June 61AD, Boudicca, who was a savage Celtic Queen, was declared dead!

After the death of King Prasutagus, who was the leader of the Iceni tribe, there have been many uprisings from the Celtic savages!

Boudicca, who was King Prasutagus' wife and Queen, refused to pay her taxes to the Roman Government. Rebellng she marched her Celtic warriors to different cities in Britain to fight the Roman Army.

The Celtic Tribes rampaged through many cities such as Londonium and Colchester to kill thousands of Roman men, women and children.

Yesterday, it was reported that Governor Suetonius tactically outmanoeuvred and defeated Boudicca and her army and captured her daughters.

Olivia Orrillius observed from the city walls of Londonium. She reported, "In the distance, I watched frantically as Boudicca was being dragged by her long, curly, beautiful hair, I could hear her screaming in distress. It was traumatising!

Shockingly, I witnessed the Romans decapitating the Celts! There was a river of blood flooding across the battle ground. Heads were rolling as they were chopped off and there was chaos in the bloody city. It was hideous!

Later in the evening, I saw a very distraught Boudicca sipping from a glass bottle and within seconds she collapsed to her death!"

Iceni Queen Dead

By Rosie McMullan

On the morning, 1 June 61 AD, Boudicca, a savage Celtic queen, was announced dead!

After King Prastutagus' death, who was the leader of the Celtic Iceni tribe known as the savages, there have been several uprisings by the Celtic warriors!

Boudicca who was King Prastutagus' wedded wife and queen, has refused to pay her taxes to the Roman Government so war has been declared.

Rebelling, the Iceni Queen accumulated her Celtic army and marched her soldiers to many cities across Britannia to fight the Roman army.

Many Celtic tribes have rampaged through cities like wild elephants such as Londinum and Colchester killing thousands of Roman men, women and children which lived in Britannia.

Yesterday, it was reported that, Roman Governor Suetonius, tactically outmanoeuvred Boudicca and her savage ferocious army plus he captured Boudicca and her daughters.

Lyla Octaviaiaous observed from the city walls of Londinum. She reported, "Early in the morning, I saw the savage Celtic army battling against the protected Roman troops. The war was gruesome when the Celts were trying to stab the Romans as they were doing a tortoise formation but it was no use. Instead they ended up stabbing themselves. When the sun started to set, all the Celtic soldiers were defeated, but Boudicca was left. The Romans couldn't resist to torture her so they dragged her by her ginger curly hair and put her in a giant iron cage. She looked like she was a prisoner to them. When the sky revelled the night stars, I observed Boudicca drinking from a triangular glass bottle and later she her lying on the ground motionless!"

Boudicca is Poisoned!

By Valeria Florica

On the morning of the first of June 61 AD, Boudicca, who was a savage Celtic queen, was declared dead!

After the death of King Prasutagus, who was the leader of the Iceni tribe, there have been many up risings from the Celtic savages!

Boudicca, who was king Prasutagus' wife and queen refused to pay taxes to the Roman Government. She rebelled and gathered her Celtic warriors and marched them to the cities in Britannia such as Londinium and Colchester to fight the Roman army.

Celtic warriors rampaged through cities setting houses on fire and killing thousands of Roman men, woman and children.

Yesterday it was reported that Governor Suetonius tactically outmanoeuvred and sadly defeated the Celtic army and captured Boudicca and her daughters.

Augustus Orrillius observed from the city walls of Londinum. He reported , “ At the start of the battle I watched as Roman soldiers were cutting Celtic warriors in half with their mighty silver swords. I watched as Boudicca was dragged by her curly ginger hair and put in a large metal cage. I witnessed the Roman soldiers coming closer and closer to me as I sprinted into the dark horrifying woods.

As night came down I watched as Boudicca grabbed an oval bottle and removed the pink stopper then she drank the contents and collapsed to the ground. I thought to myself, that must be poison.”

Boudicca is defeated!

By Holly Hayward

On the morning of the first of June 61AD, Boudicca, who was a savage Celtic Queen, was declared dead!

After the death of King Prasutagus, who was the leader of the Iceni Tribe, there have been many up risings from the Celtic savages!

Boudicca, who was King Prasutagus' wife Queen refused to pay her taxes to the Roman government. She rebelled and gathered her army and marched them to cities in Britannia to fight the Roman army.

Celtic tribes rampaged to cities like Londonium and Colchester and killed thousand of Roman woman, men and Children.

Yesterday, it was reported that Governor Suetonius tactically outmanoeuvred Boudicca and her army and captured Boudicca and her daughters.

Flavia Orrillius observed from the city walls of Londinium. She reported that, “ As dawn struck I observed the mighty Roman army slaughtering many, many Celts, with their strong steel sword! Blood oozed out of their necks. It was horrifying to watch and made me physically sick to my stomach!

Later in the evening I watched nervously, Boudicca drinking out of a yellow bottle and within seconds she had collapsed to her death! It must have been poison!”